When Structures Fail: Reflecting on the South Philadelphia Garage Collapse

The recent parking garage collapse in Philadelphia has left families, coworkers, and an entire community shaken.

What began as a typical weekday afternoon quickly turned tragic when a seven-story garage under construction in the Grays Ferry neighborhood gave way—collapsing floor by floor in a matter of moments.

At least one person lost their life, and as of this writing, two others were reported missing as rescue crews worked tirelessly through unstable debris to search for survivors. At Galfand Berger, our thoughts are with all of those affected by this tragedy.

What to Do If You Are Hurt at Work in Pennsylvania

Getting injured on the job can turn your life upside down in an instant. Medical bills pile up, paychecks stop, and uncertainty sets in fast. If you are hurt at work in Pennsylvania, one of the most important things to understand is this: do not rely on your employer or their insurance company to automatically take care of you.

Under Pennsylvania law, Workers' Compensation is supposed to protect you. It should cover your medical treatment and provide wage loss benefits if you are unable to work. In theory, the system is there to help injured workers recover without financial stress.

But in reality, it does not always work that way.

Spring Driving Dangers: Why Car Accidents Increase — and What to Do If You're Involved in One

As winter fades and spring arrives, many drivers welcome warmer weather and longer days. But with this seasonal shift comes a hidden danger: a noticeable increase in motor vehicle accidents (MVA). More commuters, road construction, pedestrians, cyclists, and unpredictable weather conditions all contribute to a higher risk of collisions.

Understanding why accidents spike in the spring—and knowing what to do if you're involved in one—can make all the difference in protecting your health, your rights, and your financial future.

Think Before You Post: How Social Media Can Impact Your Personal Injury Case in Pennsylvania

In today's world, it's second nature to share updates on social media. But if you've been injured in an accident, what you post online can have serious consequences for your personal injury case—especially under Pennsylvania law.

Insurance companies and defense attorneys routinely monitor platforms like Facebook, Instagram, and TikTok, looking for anything they can use to challenge your claim. Even an innocent post can be taken out of context and used against you.
